

Prioritizing the health and safety of our Hanger family during COVID-19

March 27, 2020

AUSTIN, Texas – March 27, 2020 – As the world responds to the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, we at Hanger remain focused on protecting the health and safety of our employees, orthotic and prosthetic patients, customers, associates and communities around the country.

We have a cross-functional leadership team closely monitoring the evolving COVID-19 situation, including guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and World Health Organization (WHO). In addition, Hanger is following social distancing, shelter-in-place, and essential-travel-only mandates by state and local governments and complying with all guidance.

With this information, the team is communicating and implementing thoughtful plans to preserve the safety and well-being of our Hanger family, including our approximately 5,000 employees across the U.S.

As essential healthcare providers, our Hanger Clinic team members are working to minimize exposure and close contact, while focusing on essential care.

"Our local Hanger Clinic teams across the U.S. are taking all necessary measures to help prevent the spread of COVID-19, while providing continuity of care that impacts patient safety or essential life functions," said Hanger Clinic President Sam Liang. "We are communicating with patients to evaluate individual needs, postponing appointments or using virtual consultations whenever possible."

Patients who have questions are encouraged to visit the Hanger Clinic resource page for the most up-to-date guidance on steps being taken to provide safe care.

"We are grateful to our Hanger family for all they are doing to meet this unprecedented challenge, particularly our employees, who are working with diligence and dedication to evolve how we provide essential care and ensure we fulfill our mantra of empowering human potential during this time and always," said Vinit Asar, President and CEO of Hanger. "Rest assured, we are continuing to take all necessary measures to protect the health of our Hanger family and respond thoughtfully to this on-going situation."
